ATLANTA – The final sale of City Hall East is nigh and neighbors are excited about turning the old city staple into live, work, play community. The building, which has been out of use for about three or four years, will be re-opening in 2013 as a combination of condos, offices and shops.

City Hall is one of the principal locations or landmarks along the Atlanta Beltline eastside trail. When this establishment opens, it will give residents access to the new Historic Fourth Ward Park and to the Beltline skate park.

Jamestown Properties will be purchasing the two-million square foot complex through their subsidiary Green Street Properties.
